Dems: Voter ID law will restrict rights

Senate Republicans narrowly passed a voter identification bill yesterday that Democrats say will disproportionately affect thousands of minority voters.

The controversial legislation was approved 26-23, with all 20 Democrats voting against it along with three Republicans, according to Committee of Seventy, a local government watchdog. The bill now heads to the House, which approved a similar bill, and then to Gov. Tom Corbett, who has said he would sign it.

Under the bill, voters would be required to provide proof of identification at the polls before voting, starting with the Nov. 6 general election. Republicans said the measure is aimed at cracking down on voter fraud, but Democrats and Philadelphia's leading political watchdog group said it will disenfranchise voters and cost the state $4 million.

"Voting is a constitutional right," said state Sen. Vincent Hughes of Philadelphia. "Under the guise of preventing voter fraud, this bill would actually suppress the right to vote for many eligible voters in Pennsylvania who do not have a photo ID."

"If voters are turned away because they don't have an acceptable ID, there's a good chance they will never come back," Committee of Seventy CEO and President Zack Stalberg said. METRO/SDL

Dry run

The Committee of Seventy said a dry run using the new rules will happen before the upcoming Republican presidential primary next month:

- A dress rehearsal for the law will take place for the April 24 primary.
- Seventy's will lead an education effort.

▶ Make sure to bring your ID.

Store owner shot in robbery

A West Oak Lane store owner is in extremely critical condition after being shot during an attempted robbery Tuesday. The man, 38, was working at the counter of Super Chicken Grocery on Rodney Street shortly before 7:30 p.m. when a man wearing a black ski mask tried to take money from behind the register, police said. A struggle ensued and the victim was shot in the chest and arm. METRO

Music goes quiet

The West Oak Lane Jazz and Arts Festival, which has brought singing legends such as Chaka Khan to Northwest Philadelphia since 2003, has come to an end. The Ogontz Avenue Revitalization Corp., which organized the three-day event, said the cancellation is not due to a lack of funding. It hopes to open a year-round performance.

Up to no good in Overbrook

Three of city's 'most wanted' fugitives call West Philly neighborhood home Other neighborhoods hide even more

A tiny stretch of Media Street in Overbrook seemed peaceful yesterday afternoon. Neighbors walking back and forth from the corner store greeted one another as school buses dropped children off to waiting parents. "It's definitely a close neighborhood," said 12-year resident Tracy Nelson. "Everybody knows everyone around here."

"There's a police station right around the corner — they come through here all the time," his neighbor, Ronald Curmety, said, gesturing to a passing squad car.

But the noontime calm is deceptive. Within a couple blocks are last known addresses for three of Philadelphia's most wanted violent fugitives. There are 29 more within a five-mile radius and at least one woman familiar with the neighborhood isn't comfortable with its vibe.

"It's not a good place," said former resident Jules Edwards as she waited at the corner for her grandson's school bus. One of her daughters still lives on the block. "We were walking up the street just the other day after getting off of the bus and two men were fighting each other. All we could do was yell, 'Call 911!'"

"It's getting worse — just look at the streets," she said as she motioned to potholes in the ragged asphalt. "But everywhere is bad."

According to the Philadelphia Police Department's list of the city's 100 most wanted fugitives, the majority of the criminals listed — wanted for crimes including aggravated assault, robbery, rape and murder — are concentrated in West, Southwest and North Philadelphia.

Police released the felons' names and photos on YouTube Tuesday, with plans to air the slideshow on Channel 64. Suspects highlighted were chosen based on the nature of each criminal's crime plus the lack of leads detectives have uncovered concerning their whereabouts, according to Evers. "They're definitely individuals we're having a hard time finding," he said.

The decision to publicize the fugitives' information online and on television was originally announced by Mayor Michael Nutter in January as part of a citywide crime-reduction plan. Measuring the success of the initiative has not been easy; it has become an additional layer of investigative police work.

"We're trying to keep track of how many people we take into custody are arrested based on tips, whether they were pulled over for a traffic violation or an officer recognized them as wanted, whether it was due to police work. We investigate all of this after an individual gets arrested," he said.

ALEX WIGGLESWORTH

For the second time since 2008, the Philadelphia police department has released a list of its 100 most wanted fugitives. Metro reviewed the list four years ago and again mapped the addresses for every wanted person. Once again, more fugitives have called Kingsessing home than any other area.

28

Fugitives on the most wanted list suspected in murder cases. That comes to $560,000 in potential reward cash for turning them in.

"We're getting a lot of hits on YouTube. I spoke to Homicide and some people are already calling in reference to those photos." EVERS

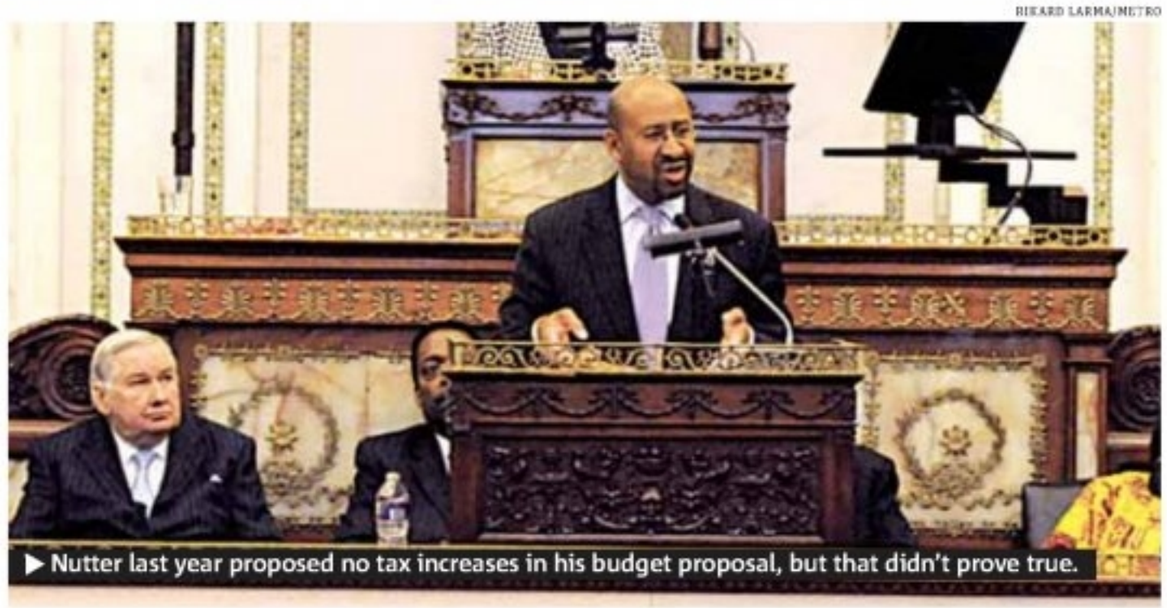
Mayor, fool us once, shame on us, fool us twice ...

No new taxes to be proposed today in Mayor Nutter's 2012-2013 budget proposal Last year, he said same thing only for tax hike to come later

RICARD LARMA/METRO



Nutter last year proposed no tax increases in his budget proposal, but that didn't prove true.

No new taxes and no tax increases.

That's a line taxpayers and City Council will likely hear numerous times from Mayor Michael Nutter today as he gives his budget address in Council chambers. Bold it, italicize it, underline it.

And while that is technically true, most homeowners will still end up shelling out more for property taxes for the third straight year as a result of the city's new property value assessments, the first accepted since 2004. The average assessment is expected to increase 25 percent, although some homeowners will see a decrease, with the difference phased in over the next three years, according to city finance director Rob Dubow.

This comes on the heels of temporary increases in property tax the last two years to help close deficits for the city and the School District of Philadelphia. Those temporary increases will expire June 30.

"Values have gone up. We're capturing that value," city finance director Rob Dubow said yesterday.

Dubow said the new assessments are akin to someone paying more in wage taxes because they received a raise. He deflected talk of delaying the assessments another year, which was suggested by some on Council.

"There's going to be a great deal of doubt and distrust," said Zack Stalberg, president and CEO of Committee of Seventy, a government watchdog group. "It's going to be a big job for both the mayor and City Council to explore this and explain it in a way that real people can understand."

One reason for some skepticism is that Council must approve the budget with the new assessments before even finding out whether the numbers are accurate. A consulting firm will vet the data after assessments are done by June.

SOLOMON D. LEACH
sleach@metro.us

By the numbers

Here's a closer look at the city's upcoming revaluation of property values:

- To compensate for drastically higher property assessments, the administration said it will propose a reduction to the millage rate to hit a target revenue figure. The millage rate will not be calculated, however, until the assessments are complete.
- Low-income seniors can qualify for a property-tax freeze.
- The Homestead exemption, which would reduce property-tax bills for residents, must be approved by the Legislature. The Senate voted in favor of it Tuesday, but it still needs House support.

Drivers texting in Pa. now face fines

Philly drivers, you can take your cell phones back out — but only for talking.

A state ban on texting while driving went into effect today, superseding a 2-year-old city ban on any use of cell phones while driving. In other words, you can now go back to enjoying a phone conversation while driving on city streets, a police spokeswoman confirmed yesterday.

"Your most important job when behind the wheel is to focus only on driving. Most people would never close their eyes for five seconds while driving, but that's how long you take your eyes off the road — or even longer — every time you send or read a text message," state Transportation secretary Barry Schoch, said in a press release. "It's not just your own life you're risking; it's the lives and safety of every motorist around you."

The texting while driving law isn't the first state legislation to weaken a Philadelphia statute. Over the past two-plus decades, a couple attempts to strength gun control locally have failed because of state "pre-emption" laws.

Former state Rep. Josh Shapiro, a Democrat from Montgomery County, pushed for years for the state ban on texting while driving, eventually getting enough of his Republican counterparts to sign on after hounding fellow lawmakers with statistics about distracted driving. In the years since he started his crusade, many other states passed similar laws. Pennsylvania is the 38th state to adopt a texting ban.

Crashes in Pennsylvania in 2010 related to distracted driving, according to state police. Sixty-eight resulted in deaths.

Another bus stolen, abandoned

ELMWOOD. The second yellow school bus to be stolen in Southwest Philadelphia this week was taken early yesterday and then crashed into a parked car by an unknown driver, police said.

Police said the incident happened around 1:15 a.m. on the 6800 block of Buist Avenue, stolen from a bus depot there. The bus struck a parked vehicle and the suspect fled on foot. No injuries were reported. It crashed into a car attempting to turn at Buist Avenue and South 68th Street.

The initial school bus abduction occurred Monday afternoon when the vehicle allegedly was taken by teenagers in Kensington. They abandoned the bus and no arrests have been made. METRO

Apple's new iPad has 4G, retina display

Apple's new tablet has better visuals, camera Is it enough in current climate of competition?

▶ Apple CEO Tim Cook introduced the anticipated iPad update.

Apple Inc. took the wraps off a faster, 4G-equipped iPad starting at $629, hoping the latest version of its tablet can safeguard its dominance over rivals ranging from Amazon.com Inc. to Samsung Electronics Co. Ltd.

Chief Executive Tim Cook, presiding over his second major product launch since 2011's voice-enabled iPhone 4S, introduced the highly anticipated third iteration of the tablet — which is available for pre-orders from Wednesday and will hit store shelves March 16.

The high-end model of Apple's latest iPad will be capable of operating on a high-speed 4G Long-Term Evolution network. At speeds roughly 10 times faster than current 3G technology, that may help banish the sometimes-shaky video quality of older devices.

Analysts had anticipated many of the features Cook showed off yesterday, including a higher-definition "retina display" screen and a better camera.

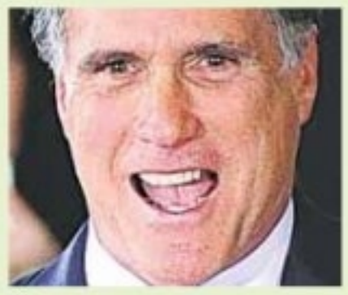
Some had held out hope of an Apple surprise, recalling late CEO Steve Jobs and his now-iconic "one more thing" unveils at the very end of the proceedings. Others said the upgrades and tweaks to the iPad could only go so far in fending off hard-charging competition.

"While the hardware is notably enhanced ... there are still some areas of improvement that Apple needs to work on in order to stay ahead of its encroaching competitors," said Greenwich Consulting managing director Fred Huet. REUTERS

Out of pocket

- An updated version of the model with only Wi-Fi remains at $499.
- The most expensive 4G model, with 64 gigabytes of storage, will go for $829.
- The previous iPad 2 with 3G also sold for $629 to $829.
- The cheapest model of the previous-generation iPad 2 now retails at $399.

Romney camp tells rivals: You can't catch him



"As ... opponents attempt to ignore the basic principles of math, the only person's odds of winning they are increasing are President Obama's."
ROMNEY ADVISER RICH BEESON

Mitt Romney's campaign told his Republican presidential rivals yesterday they could not catch him and nudged them to quit the race even though he failed to deliver a knockout blow in the biggest round of nominating contests.

Romney won six of the 10 "Super Tuesday" states, including a narrow victory in Ohio's marquee matchup, expanding his lead in delegates and solidifying his frontrunner status in the race to find the Republican challenger to President Barack Obama in the November 6 election.

But rival Rick Santorum won three states and Newt Gingrich captured one, keeping their hopes alive and raising the chance the divisive Republican fight could drag on for months. Both vowed they are in the race for the long haul.

Romney's wins on Tuesday gave him more than 400 delegates, according to many media counts, more than doubling Santorum's second-place total and moving him closer to the 1,144 needed to clinch the nomination. REUTERS

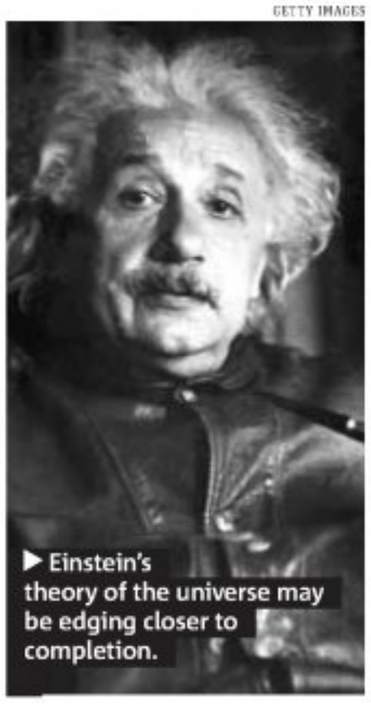
US scientists detect hint of God particle

GETTY IMAGES



▶ Einstein's theory of the universe may be edging closer to completion.

Scientists said they have gotten even closer to proving the existence of the elusive Higgs boson, the so-called "God particle" that supplies mass to matter and would complete Albert Einstein's theory of the universe.

Analyzing data from some 500 trillion subatomic particle collisions designed to emulate conditions right after the Big Bang when the universe was formed, scientists at Fermilab outside Chicago produced some 1,000 Higgs particles over a decade of work.

"Unfortunately, this hint is not significant enough to conclude that the Higgs boson exists," said Rob Roser, a physicist at Fermilab, near Chicago, in explaining the findings. REUTERS

Dems don't want bust of Limbaugh on display

A plan to place a bust in the Missouri Capitol to honor Rush Limbaugh, the conservative broadcaster embroiled in controversy over his calling a university student a "slut" on the air, has drawn protests from state Democrats who are trying to block the effort.

The bust, proposed by Republican state House Speaker Steve Tilley, would sit in the Capitol rotunda alongside those of other prominent Missouri natives such as writer Mark Twain and former president Harry Truman.

Some 47 Missouri Democratic leaders, in a letter delivered to Tilley on Tuesday, said Limbaugh should not be honored and that the action would be "inappropriate and offensive," a spokesman for Tilley confirmed. REUTERS

Anonymous hackers take down Vatican website

The Italian branch of the hackers group Anonymous took down the Vatican's website yesterday, saying it was an attack on the Roman Catholic Church's scandals and conservative doctrine.

The Vatican website was inaccessible. A spokesman said he could not confirm that the crash was the work of the hackers group but said technicians were working to bring it back up.

A statement on the Italian website of the loosely knit cyber-activists group accused the Church of being responsible for a long list of misdeeds throughout history, including the selling of indulgences in the 16th century and burning heretics during the Inquisition. REUTERS

Job market shows more signs of life

U.S. companies increased their hiring in February, shoring up expectations that the labor market's recovery has moved into a higher gear.

Separate data yesterday showed that wages grew much more quickly at the end of last year than originally estimated — good news for consumers, but a potential inflation problem for the Federal Reserve.

The private sector added 216,000 jobs last month, according to the ADP National Employment Report, topping economists' expectations for a gain of 208,000. REUTERS

Our Aim is to Beat Most Offers!

We Strive to Beat All Legitimate Written Offers
Before Bringing your items to us, take them to other dealers. Have them give you legitimate offers in writing. Then bring your jewelry and written offers to one of our locations. Although no one can guarantee with certainty they are paying the highest price for an article at any particular time, we will strive to beat most legitimate written offers.

Why We Can Usually Pay More Than Other Dealers
Most jewelers and dealers specialize in few items and focus on newer looking items to resell. Because they are unfamiliar with many other items including vintage jewelry, old watches, coins, flatware, etc. they tend to offer very low prices because these items are not readily saleable for them. Our company has many specialized buyers for the various classifications of items that we purchase, therefore we can usually pay more.

A Note Regarding the Up To Prices listed in this Ad
The condition and rarity of an item determines its price. If an item is in excellent condition and very rare it might be worth the up to price, or even more. However, if an item is in poor condition, the value will be lower. For example, a 1927 S Quarter could be worth $7,000 in new condition or less than $20 in poor condition. The up to price reflects items of exceptional quality and rarity. Although it is unlikely you will have these items due to their extreme rarity, feel free to bring whatever items you may have and we will evaluate them free of charge.

Customer Satisfaction
Most of our business comes from satisfied customers and referrals which includes their friends and families. Our showrooms are safe and private. Our staff is courteous and professional and we strive as a company to make your selling experience a pleasant one.

I heard about this store from the radio and as soon as I got the chance I came to sell my unused jewelry. It was a great & friendly service and I will be back!
— J. Simek

The staff was helpful and friendly. I was able to take old jewelry and walk away with a handsome amount of money.
— D. Smith

Why You Should Sell Now!

The Economy & Market Value
The recent downturn of our economy during the last three years has caused gold and other precious metal prices to soar to the highest levels of all time. This is the reason this is best time to sell before prices drop.

Get Cash Immediately
Our professional staff will provide you with a speedy evaluation and make all payments in cash.

No Charge
We do not charge for our consultations. Find out how much cash your unwanted items will put in your pocket. Many customers have been surprised and delighted by the amount of money they received.

Safe, Secure & Friendly
Our showrooms are safe and private. Our staff is courteous and professional and we strive as a company to make your selling experience a pleasant one.

Licensed, Bonded & Insured
We are licensed, bonded and insured in all cities and towns in which we conduct business.

Help the Environment
Using recycled precious metals for jewelry is an important way for jewelers to source precious metals more responsibly. Precious metals that have already been used in some way, including "vintage," "renewed," or "reclaimed" metals from jewelry and electronics, are not directly implicated in the destructive impacts of mining. They do not share responsibility for the impacts of mining in the same way that newly mined gold does.

As this week's Super Tuesday results promise to further extend the barroom brawl that has become of the GOP nominating process, we thought we'd take some time to discuss a figure often overlooked in all the fevered angling to beat President Obama: President Obama. Mr. Obama has been without a doubt the No. 1 beneficiary of the Republican Party's self-cannibalization in this year's nasty and drawn-out primary season. So as other outlets focus on what this week's election results mean for GOP prospects in November — here's a hint: Romney will win the nomination, whether voters like it or not — we're going to address what the president has been doing with his time while the rest of us have been off following the minutia of Newt Gingrich's absurd moon colonization fantasies.

While the Republican candidates battle each other over the dubious distinction of most likely to bomb Iran back to the Stone Age, and as they relentlessly — and, if we must say, factlessly — attack the president over alleged weaknesses in foreign policy, they ignore how the Obama administration has been busy radically rewriting constitutional powers of the executive.

CHRIS MADDALONI/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Eric Holder wants you to trust President Obama. But what about the next guy?

U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder on Monday finally got around to explaining, sort of, the president's supposed justification for assassinating U.S. citizens abroad. "Due process" — the constitutionally enshrined right of Americans to basic legal protections, like not being killed by the CIA in your sleep, for instance — is not necessarily the same as "judicial process," he said. In other words, we are not actually guaranteed, as many had previously thought, the right to a fair trial before being judged guilty and terminated. Or, as Stephen Colbert parodied Tuesday night: "Due process just means there's a process that you do."

The administration simply wants us to trust that they will not abuse their newfound powers of execution. Bizarrely, the right wing is OK with this; or rather, judging from their public statements, they (the non-Ron Paul presidential candidates, at least) find the policy not quite extreme enough. Even more bizarrely: Democrats don't seem particularly stressed over it either.

Here we see how party loyalty distorts independent belief: If this was a Bush — or, God help us, a Romney, Santorum or Gingrich — trying to pull something like this, Dems would be frothing at the mouth. Instead, they cheer this erosion of individual liberty.

But Obama won't be president forever. U.S. politics are reactionary: Even if Obama wins re-election, we'll have a Republican executive soon enough. So while the GOP pushes the limits of extremism, let's not lose sight of extremity in the White House. The next tenant may not be quite as trustworthy.

THE WORD

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

Magazine covers: Doin' the bump

As a fellow pregnant lady, I'm all for Jessica Simpson posing on the cover of Elle magazine while hoisting around a fetus. Yay for the miracle of life and all that. But why oh why did she have to do it naked? With the exception of Demi Moore's famous 1991 nude pregnancy photo for Vanity Fair, which set the bar for pregnancy photo shoots, why have any of these stars shown off their naked bellies on magazine covers? It's as though these magazines — and starlets — need to flaunt the skin, just so you won't mistake them for being, well, fat. Because a woman with actual curves on a fashion magazine? What a crazy concept!

But perhaps I'm wrong and am just being a prude. What do you think of the omnipresent naked pregnant celebrity cover trend? Do you want more naked bump in your life or do you prefer your pregnant celebrities lookin' good — but with maybe a shirt on?

There's a girl in there!

In the Elle feature, Simpson confirmed that she and fiance Eric Johnson are expecting a baby girl. Still, given Johnson's athleticism, Simpson is worried her daughter won't be girlie enough. "I swear, I will croak if she asks me for a pair of Nikes instead of Christian Louboutins," she tells the magazine. "We're gonna have this athletic girl and I won't even be able to take her shopping, because all she's going to want is sports bras and Nikes."

Talking points

Ferrell's makeup where the sun don't shine

Will Ferrell's role in his new film, "Casa de mi Padre," turned out to be quite revealing. "Someone had the either wonderful or horrible task of putting makeup on my ass," he tells Rolling Stone magazine. But baring all isn't something that bothers the "Saturday Night Live" alum. "This kind of thing is not a big deal to me," he explains. "In college, they had this thing where you'd run naked on fraternity row, and if anyone challenged me, I'd be happy to do it." Another college experience he was happy to do? Losing his virginity at age 21. "In my mind's eye, it seemed like the way it was supposed to happen," he says, admitting that his mom had assumed he'd lost it much earlier.

Hewitt loves her boobs, too

Jennifer Love Hewitt has something in common with her fans when it comes to appreciating certain parts of her anatomy. "It's horrible to say, but I like my boobs," the former "Ghost Whisperer" star tells Maxim magazine when asked what body part she is most proud of. "They've always served me well. They're good." Well, maybe they haven't served her that well recently, the currently single Hewitt admits: "It might sound so stupid, but guys do not hit on me," she says. "I'm not really sure why."

Snooki confirms the pregnancy rumors

"Jersey Shore" star Nicole "Snooki" Polizzi has taken to the cover of Us Weekly to announce what everyone already knew: that she's pregnant and engaged. "I have different priorities now," Polizzi says. "As long as I know I'm ready and [fiance Jionni LaValle] is ready." The reality star admits that discovery of her pregnancy — right after New Year's — caused a moment of panic. Her first thought? "'S—, I've been drinking,'" she says. "I was worried."

Illuminating the Haggadah

▶ Jonathan Safran Foer

GIANLUCA CENTOLINI

▶ Nathan Englander

JULIANA SOHN

With 'New American Haggadah,' Jonathan Safran Foer and Nathan Englander hope to provide a more accessible version of the Seder text

That Jonathan Safran Foer is part of the team behind "New American Haggadah" — a revised English translation of the sacred Jewish prayer book — isn't entirely surprising. The intricacies, subtleties, trickeries and delicacies of language are as much a part of his writings as the themes of family, tradition and Judaism that act as the fleeting scaffolding of much of his work.

And yet, Foer doesn't consider himself a person of faith, let alone a rabbinical scholar.

"When I started thinking about what it might read like, what it might look like, what its function might be in the world, I gave a lot of thought to people who might translate it," says Foer. "Should it be Hebrew language translators? But then I started thinking, what are some other possibilities? Could we create something that wasn't so obscure? In my mind, a lot of English translations are unnecessarily confusing."

Ultimately, Foer recruited longtime friend and fellow fiction author Nathan Englander to do the new translation of the text, which is read at the Seder table each year and plays a central role in the celebration. Far from the flashy project that you could reasonably expect from two young writers with a large bag of literary playthings, "New American Haggadah" has a quiet reverence for its ancient source material, reflected in both the translation and essays by writers including Lemony Snicket and Rebecca Newberger Goldstein.

"I've been going to Seders as long as I've been alive. They always meant a great deal to me, but I always suspected that they could mean even more," says Foer. "The Seder is in so many ways constrained by the Haggadah — it directs the conversations that people have, it affects the pacing of the evening. It's hard to have a good, engaging Seder without a good, engaging Haggadah."

On 'Extremely Loud and Incredibly Close'

The film adaptation of Foer's 2005 novel "Extremely Loud and Incredibly Close" was a Best Picture nominee at the Academy Awards last month. He saw the film out of curiosity, but not as a literary watchdog. "It's complicated — I wrote the book. It's not like I was some schmuck walking into the theater wondering 'Will this be good?' But I didn't feel any proprietary [feelings] toward the story or the characters."

▶ Disney's sci-fi adventure "John Carter" opens this weekend.

1 'John Carter'
In Disney's adaptation of Edgar Rice Burroughs' novels, Taylor Kitsch plays a Civil War vet who can't catch a break: He ends up on Mars, gets taken prisoner by giants and then should probably go back and save the princess after he finally escapes.

2 'A Thousand Words'
Eddie Murphy angers a spiritual guru, inciting a curse — or a blessing, if that's your bag, hippie — that gives him only 1,000 words to speak before he dies.

3 'Silent House'
Supposedly based on a true story, this low-budget haunted house horror flick tells the story of a father and daughter who have been hired to restore an old cottage — but the weird noise coming from the top floor wasn't in the contract.

4 'Project X'
Shot hand-held by a cast of unknowns, this one — like every great high school film — is about nerds who conquer all by throwing a rager.

5 'Dr. Seuss' The Lorax'
Zac Efron, Danny DeVito, Taylor Swift and Ed Helms voice the central characters of the beloved environmentalist children's story about the extinction of the "truffula trees." METRO

DRAMA. When The Machine singles out a 6-month-old baby, the "Is this a victim or evil-doer?" quandary that Finch and Reese usually face isn't even an issue — unless crying for no discernable reason is deemed an act of terrorism, which some new parents may rally for. Either way, we love Reese as a protective parent, even if only to see him rocking the baby sling.

Is flirting outside your relationship ever OK?

Shrink wrap

HEALTH.METRO.US

Conan O'Brien recently offered a solution for the lonely-hearted: Watch his video of celebrities flirting directly with viewers. From John Krasinski to Emmy Rossum to Fred Armisen, the stars looked at the camera and acted like they were meeting you in a bar and hoped to hook up. Some of those flirters might be looking for love, but what about John Krasinski, who is married? Do you think his wife minded? In this case, he may have just been playing a role, but people in relationships deal with this question all the time: Is flirting good or bad?

The answer is that it depends. For everyone, putting yourself out there with other people of the opposite sex and making smart conversation helps you feel desirable and confident. If, however, you are already in a relationship, then you want to make sure all that heightened sexual energy is stored up for your partner, who you will share it with later. If your relationship is solid, then a little flirting is OK. Sometimes watching your partner flirt can even give you a sense of pride.

But if it makes you feel threatened, then it might not be such a good thing. If the foundation of a relationship isn't strong, it can increase your feelings of doubt and mistrust. The person doing the flirting might feel good, but it might make the other partner feel insecure.

If that's the case, it's a good time to take stock and realize that rather than looking outward, you should focus your energy inward to work on strengthening your trust. You can do this by being affectionate, complimentary and expressing your love. If you still feel uncomfortable when your partner flirts with others, it can also help to set ground rules. For example, a little conversation might be OK — but if it goes beyond that and someone offers or asks for a phone number, the answer is no.

The goal is to make flirting work as a positive, rather than a negative, within your relationship.

For Internet news, get the facts straight

RE: "ANONYMOUS LEADER 'WAS AN FBI INFORMER'": If you are going to report something related to the Internet, please get your facts straight. It was not Anonymous, it was Lulzsec, a separate hacking group with little affiliation to Anonymous. They operated for 50 days from April to June last year. It was only one leader for Lulzsec, and he ratted out the others.
ANDREW ALI, VIA E-MAIL

"People should be able to express their opinion without having to be second-guessed"

RE: "A 'GROWING PAINS' REACTION": I am glad and proud that Kirk Cameron stood his ground and did not apologize for what he believes. For Christians, the Bible is the word of God, but God's word doesn't change to make certain people happy. In contrast with Tracy Morgan, he apologized after his remarks on the show, not because he was sorry but because of the pressure; he is another Limbaugh, if you ask me. People should be able to express their opinion without having to be second-guessed by people who disagree with them. CARLOS SWABY, VIA E-MAIL

Fanatical groups are utilizing a golden opportunity to force Rush Limbaugh off the airwaves, yet not a peep in the media about Rep. Maxine Waters' tirade at a recent Democratic shindig calling Republican contenders "demons" and telling Tea Partiers to "go straight to hell." Waters isn't the only liberal given a pass. Why is the media backing this campaign?
MARK HALPERN, VIA E-MAIL

Anyone who is angry about Bill Maher calling Palin the C-word has a right to be upset. Limbaugh only called Ms. Fluke a slut and prostitute. Bill Maher had no right referring to Palin as "competent."
ROBERT LA ROSA, VIA E-MAIL

Support of Israel not so clear cut

RE: SUPPORT OF ISRAEL PAYS DIVIDENDS": Please don't confuse "Israel bashing" with legitimate criticism of American and Israeli foreign policy in the region. Israel is free to make its own decisions just like the U.S. is free to disagree with those decisions. It's OK for friends to disagree. And if Israel decides they still want war, then they should go it alone. No U.S. troops, no U.S. dollars.
CARL HANSON, VIA E-MAIL

Don't Iraq Iran! The tail should not wag the dog. With all the support we give Israel they should listen to us, not the other way around; otherwise we should stop the support. The United States cannot pin its future to Israel nor can it allow Israel to dictate or control our future.
CHRIS GOLDSMITH, VIA E-MAIL

In the '80s a war was being fought in Afganistan; the CIA chief stated: "All we can do is supply the freedom fighters with Russian made weapons." Some of those are known to have been sourced from Granada, but the statement quoted above was made months before that invasion. So Israel facilitated the rise of Osama Bin Laden. For that we should be thankful? CHARLIE CHACE, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. When you're permitted to establish your own agenda, you'll function at your best. It behooves you to steer clear of anyone who always makes demands on your time.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Adopting a negative attitude will only make disruptive matters worse than they already are. If you think everything is going against you, solutions won't be possible.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Getting involved in petty politics with someone who is adroit in that kind of game- playing is not a wise thing to do. He or she will do his or her best to make you look bad.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Whatever you do, don't let your ego or temper cause you to challenge someone who could have an influence over your work or career. It might be one match you can't win.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Getting in the last word shouldn't be important to you if it results in the possibility of jeopardizing a valued friendship. It would turn out to be a win that would mean a big loss.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Be on guard so that someone in trouble doesn't maneuver you into a position where you would be held accountable for his or her mistake or debt.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. If you ignore your own counsel and do something that goes against your better judgment, you could end up paying dearly for the consequences of this folly. Stay sharp and be cool.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. It's not that you won't have adequate drive and ambition to handle everyday matters, it's more likely that you will be tempted to take on something that exceeds your limitations. Be honest about your abilities.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. It won't add any luster to your image if you deliberately do things that buck the will of the majority, just to prove your independence. All it will do is make you look selfish.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Limit the discussion of family problems to the participants only. If you talk to others about private matters, you'll be inviting them to butt in and introduce added dissension.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Gauge your audience well so that you don't inadvertently introduce a topic about which you feel strongly to someone who holds an equally strong opposing opinion.

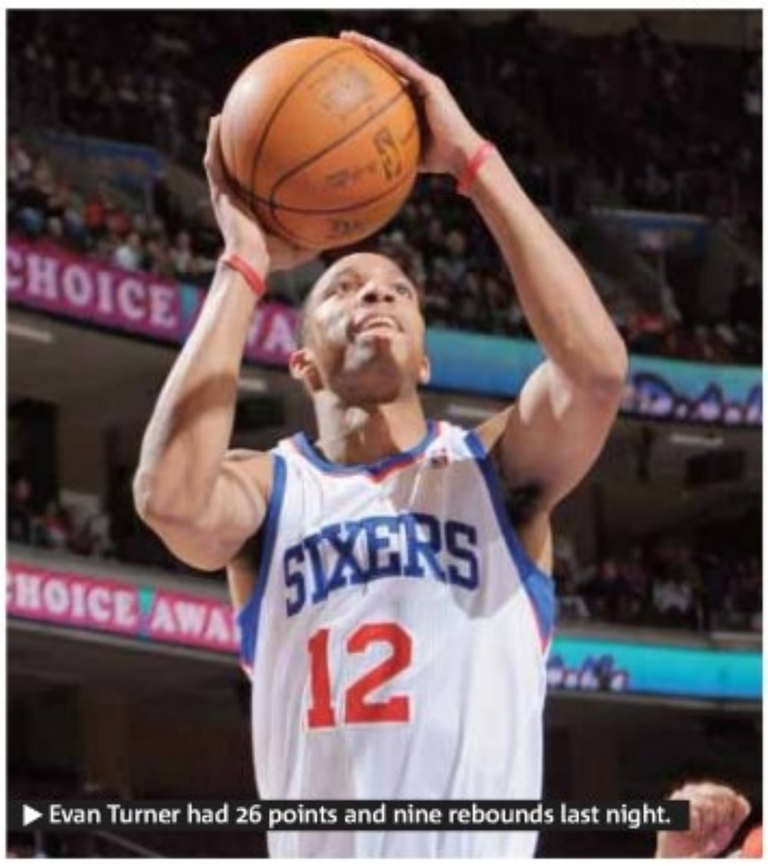
EVAN ALMIGHTY

GETTY IMAGES



▶ Evan Turner had 26 points and nine rebounds last night.

◗ Turner's breakout performance helps Sixers rout Celtics ◗ Guard to remain starter for rest of season

The Sixers had an off day Tuesday. Evan Turner didn't take advantage of it.

After going 1-for-12 in his first start of the season on Monday night, Turner wasn't about to rest. Instead, the newly minted starting shooting guard went to the gym to get shots up with assistant coach Michael Curry.

It worked. In a big way.

Making his second straight start last night, Turner went off for a career-high 26 points on 11-for-19 shooting. It cemented his place in the starting five and propelled the Sixers' to a much-needed 103-71 destruction of the Celtics.

"Sometimes it's just the basketball gods doing their thing," Turner said.

After his breakout performance, coach Doug Collins said he planned to start Turner the rest of the season — barring injury, of course.

"I was really happy for Evan Turner. He had the bounce back in his step," Collins said. "He was playing confident basketball."

Turner's first two NBA seasons have been anything but smooth. After winning National Player of the Year honors as a senior at Ohio State, he was the no-brainer No. 2 overall pick in the 2010 draft. But a woeful jumper left him with a bit role off the bench. Bust whispers and even recent rumors of off-the-court issues have plagued him.

To Turner's credit, he never whined about his role or sulked.

"I get to wake up and play basketball for a living, I don't really have any problems like normal people have," Turner said. "I've been blessed and complaining about anything else would be really childish of me."

Now Turner gives the starting unit another highly athletic defender and ball-handler. Last night, he guarded Rajon Rondo, brought the ball up the floor and snatched nine rebounds. It was finally a performance worthy of the No. 2 overall pick.

ADAM LEVITAN
alevitan@metro.us

Three things we saw:

- Elton Brand took a full week off to rest his thumb and legs at the end of February. Now he's getting lift on his jumper again and rebounding at a plus-level. It's not $80 million worth, but Brand isn't a liability out there. He had 18 points and nine boards.
- The Sixers entered the night having lost eight of their last 10 games, thus seeing their lead in the Atlantic Division shrink to one game. If this team is going to accomplish its goal of making the second round of the playoffs, holding off the Celtics and Knicks is a must.
- Thaddeus Young didn't play last night after coming down with an illness. He's day-to-day ahead of tomorrow's game against the Utah Jazz.

Temple officially joins Big East for all sports

GETTY IMAGES

▶ The Owls will play football in the Big East next season.

Weeks of speculation were finally confirmed yesterday as Temple was introduced as the newest member of the Big East Conference.

The Owls will play in the Big East for football next season and all other sports starting in 2013. Temple football, which was kicked out of the conference for a lack of success back in 2004, is proud to be back.

"We have a real football program," said Lewis Katz, chairman of Temple's athletic committee. "So we think we're going to give the Big East exactly what they deserve, and really they've given us financially the opportunity to run a stable program."

Temple reportedly had to pay a $6 million exit fee out of the Mid-American Conference, where the Owls played previously as a football-only school, and $1 million to the Atlantic 10, where it has played for all other sports.

Villanova had reportedly expressed concern about Temple's entry into the Big East. The school was worried about splitting the television revenue locally. Those fears were worked out and everyone is content.

"It's critical that the conference and both universities succeed in Philadelphia," Villanova president Rev. Peter M. Donohue said yesterday in a statement. "Even as my loyalty and obligation is to Villanova, we recognized early on that we could achieve this win-win-win, which ultimately we did." METRO

Refs swallowing whistle as playoffs inch closer

NHL officials letting guys play down the stretch Flyers committed seven minors since Feb. 25 But team has had just six man-advantages

With only 17 games left, everyone is gearing up for the playoffs. That goes for the referees, too.

Sunday night against Washington marked only the second time this season the Flyers held their opponent to no power plays. The Flyers say they've been working on discipline all season, but part of the reason they aren't going to the penalty box is because referees call fewer penalties at the end of the year. That's mainly in anticipation of the playoffs, when a lot of infractions go uncalled.

"I think the last two games the referees have been trying to let us play," Max Talbot said. "You feel like the playoffs are coming around the corner. I speak for myself, I don't mind it. As long as it is fair for both sides and they are going to let some things go, but at the same time it's hockey."

In the last four games, the Flyers have only committed seven minor penalties and opposing teams haven't gotten a power play goal against them since Feb. 25. But the calls go both ways. The Flyers have had only six man-advantages in the four-game stretch.

"There's not many power plays," said Jaromir Jagr. "And there's a lot more hooks. I feel it myself; I'm losing the puck I got hooked. Maybe the first five games, 10 games they would go [to the penalty box], but not anymore. It happens to both teams."

The advantage for the Flyers comes in part because their penalty kill has been in the bottom third of the league for most of the season and they lead the league in penalty minutes. Fewer penalties gives more ice time to Zac Rinaldo, who leads in penalty minutes.

"They're allowing little things that they didn't at the beginning of the season," Rinaldo said. "That works to our advantage. Can't complain about it."
